TRAINING

In today's educational environment, more and more students have mental health related needs.

1. Offer guidance on recognizing and responding to mental health symptoms in students. We will help staff to notice signs and common behaviors exhibited during early and escalated stages of these disorders.
2. Assistance in recognizing common complaints and disciplinary issues that students face which have underlying causes related to mental health disorders
3. Learn effective questions to ask students who are experiencing mental health symptoms and get tools to know when a student poses a safety risk.
4. Learn important interventions that can help prevent escalated cases.
5. Learn about unique denial and minimize how these behaviors correlate with substance abusing students and how to respond more effectively with this denial and minimize risk.
6. Learn concerns to keep in mind and "best practices" for response to potential safety concerns: social media, roommate conflicts, odd behaviors, and behaviors related to suicide.
7. Learn resistance behaviors in students and how to respond to and reducing resistance.

Sustainable Insecurity

“The right response to this constant, unending, low-level threat of sudden violence is to stay vigilant and reasonable, to clean up the damage, care for the injured, look out for one another, and elect leaders who will address the challenge with sanity and good judgment. And avoid the wrong responses: A police-state overreaction would be equally damaging in its own way by adding to the intolerance and suspicion that can foster radicalization, isolation and hatred.”

Lost in Translation

On the flight to Ecuador a Haitian student begins to experience moderate to severe pain in her extremities, back and upper left quadrant of abdomen. She has a pulse rate of 120 and respiratory rate of 24. She has a history of sickle cell anemia. She is checked into the hospital in Quito upon arrival. They call her Haitian MD back in NY and he recommends starting antibiotics. Ecuadoran MDs are at a loss. Student is progressively getting worse.

A Break

A South Korean exchange student suddenly starts to behave manically saying a lot of somewhat silly, nonsensical things and laughing loudly at his own comments. Two hours go by before he settles down just as abruptly as he'd started. After a pause he approaches you to ask if he had been behaving oddly during the preceding period...

Internationalization of Risk Management

International Society of Travel Medicine
Promoting healthy travel worldwide

1991-2016

But the reality is that Travel Medicine still mainly or only addresses the needs of those traveling from industrialized countries to developing countries often with a focus on North American or European travelers. But the tide has changed and there is an urgent need to address the travel medicine needs that arise from this changing pattern.

Education without Borders 2016

The Royal College of Physicians, London
8am - 6pm, 15th November 2016

The challenges facing Universities, Colleges and Schools with regard to international programmes are unique and significant. The number of students and staff travelling or living overseas is large and individuals are often in high risk countries or engaged in remote fieldwork. Communications are, at best, infrequent and generally less often than for business travellers. The problem is exacerbated by the multi stakeholder nature of the organisations making more difficult the development and implementation of appropriate travel and accommodation risk management plans. Tracking, crisis management, occupational health, insurance and managing incidents and media are some of the issues that need to be considered.
